UK Outlook for Wednesday 16 Jun 2021 to Friday 25 Jun 2021:
Likely remaining warm, perhaps very warm, and humid towards the southeast at first with the risk of a few thunderstorms developing from the south later Wednesday into Thursday. Further north and west cloud and rain will bring fresher conditions during Wednesday. The fresher air is then likely to spread to the rest of the country bringing a change to widely cooler more changeable conditions for the rest of the week, with a low risk of warm and humid air returning to the far southeast at times. Through this period there is reasonable agreement for an Atlantic influence to bring occasional spells of rain or showers interspersed with drier and sunnier conditions. Overall, temperatures are likely to be close to, or perhaps slightly below average.
